

Abstract

In a mobile communication system employing the concept of transport channels in a medium access control layer, the transport channels are combined and then subject to an interleaving process

10029970-123401